Training description

The sessions offer an overview of a few of the key trends observed in the transition to digital economies, highlighting the relevance to telecoms regulation, broadcast regulation, postal sector regulation, regulation for e-commerce and digital government, regulation for smart cities, and skills requirements for regulatory professionals and leaders. These focus areas for regulation are each extensive fields in their own right, hence each of the sessions tackles a distinct topic, highlighting key issues. Participants are offered a short list of relevant materials as essential reading in addition to interactive lecture sessions. The reading material provides the foundation for deriving benefit from the sessions.
