Training description

The disruptive technology of artificial intelligence (AI) shapes human lives and transforms societies. Artificial Intelligence systems increasingly assist and even replace human decisions in military, judicial, policing, healthcare, transport, financial, education, or social protection fields. As artificial intelligence (AI) technologies spread worldwide, international, national, and transnational discussions have increasingly focused on their consequences. The regulation of AI technologies has recently become a worldwide priority, given the unintended and unpredictable consequences of the uncontrolled diffusion of AI related to democracy, human rights, fundamental freedoms, security, and economic and social development. Different international and national governance frameworks were developed in international and national areas. The course introduces the foundations for understanding the complexity of AI governance by introducing the ethical, normative, stakeholders and technical dimensions. Each dimension reflects different challenges and dilemmas of designing AI governance structures, which will explore the benefits and limit the threat of this technology to society, the economy and functioning governance systems. The four modules of the course will equip participants with practical knowledge and tools to navigate the complex landscape of AI governance.
