Training description

This course is an advanced-level course in smart city design. It focuses on both theoretical and practical aspects of specific technologies that are required when developing smart city solutions.

There is a detailed look at the communications infrastructure that forms the backbone of information and communication technologies (ICTs), which are key factors that determine the effectiveness with which smart cities can be managed and maintained. There will also be an overview of different sensors that are commonly considered for smart city implementation. The role of the built environment, which includes buildings, street furniture, foliage, etc., is also covered, and participants will gain an appreciation of the role played by construction material and other parameters in radiofrequency (RF) propagation, which enables wireless communication networks to transmit information between multiple locations.

For more information about the training objectives, target population, entry requirements, methodology, evaluation and content, consult the page here.

How to apply

In order to register for the training, applicants should:

1. Create an ITU Academy account here
2. Apply for the course here
3. The selection of participants for the course will be made by the course coordinators, based on the course's entry requirements, selection criteria and available number of seats. If selected, you will receive a notification by email.

How to pay for the training

This course is organized by , an ITU Academy Training Centre, which will collect the training fees directly.
