Training description

The 'financing school connectivity' course is a 16-hour program designed to provide policymakers and government officials with a specialized and actionable understanding of financing school connectivity. The curriculum is focused on the financial landscape, dedicating its first two sections to a thorough exploration of the school connectivity financing ecosystem. Participants will dissect diverse funding sources—public, private, and international—and compare various financing models, including public-private partnerships (PPPs), blended finance, and other innovative approaches.

The latter two sections then delve into a comprehensive suite of funding mechanisms specifically engineered to mitigate investment risks in school connectivity projects. This includes a detailed examination of grants, subsidies, guarantees, sovereign funds, co-investment strategies, advance market commitments, and creative financial solutions such as bonds, notes, loans, and microfinance tailored for the educational context. This course aims to equip leaders with specialized financial knowledge to analyze, plan, and mobilize diverse resources effectively, ensuring sustainable and equitable digital transformation in schools.
