Table Top Exercise (TTX): the unfortunate case of Mountlandia

When? Used at the end of a couple day training „National cyber crisis management course“

Why its worth it? Requires the participants to use the information that we have been discussing during the training and apply it in practice

How it works? Groupwork, injects and timing

Why it works (evidence it works): Feedback from the participants

Biggest limitation: Uneven group dynamics

If you want to try it, my advice is*: Prepare for various scenarios of group dynamics and pay attention to small details

So my account number has appeared on the dark web. Please check if yours is too. Rumour has it, "Mountfinance" is not keeping our data safe enough - if the account numbers are out, more data will follow...

Cyber incident in Mountlandia

~ Part 1 ~

The incident

In the early hours of the 29th of October, a significant cyber incident occurred that has now come to public attention. It appears that LLC "Mountfinance" has fallen victim to a sophisticated cyberattack. Preliminary investigations reveal that sensitive customer information, specifically bank account numbers, has been compromised.

Attack Vector: The cyberattack exploited a previously unknown vulnerability in the bank's online banking system. Attackers gained unauthorized access to a database containing customer account numbers.

Data Leakage: The cybercriminals responsible for the attack have subsequently leaked a portion of the stolen data onto the dark web. As of now, only bank account numbers have been confirmed to be part of the data breach. However, the full extent of the breach and the identity of the attackers remain under investigation.

Current situation

Customers of LLC "Mountfinance" are growing increasingly alarmed as they learn of the data breach. The central bank, national cybersecurity agency, and law enforcement agencies are already aware of the situation and are initiating investigations and response efforts. The media has begun reporting on the incident, and public confidence in the security of Mountlandia's financial sector is at risk.
